WHY COLORED ANGORA GOATS?

ANGORA GOATS are a docile, gentle breed making them an excellent choice for women and children. They are also easy on the land making them a great small farm alternative. In an area that can support a single cow and calf, you can successfully raise 7-10 Angora goats.

HISTORY - Angora Goats originated in Asia Minor and early references in the Bible date the origin of the breed to somewhere between the 12th and 15th centuries B.C. In time, the breed became well established near Ankara, Turkey, from which the name "Angora" is derived.

White Angora goats are well documented in history but colored Angora goats were purposefully culled from commercial ranches. In 1999, the Colored Angora Goat Breeders Association (CAGBA) was formed to help promote colored Angora goats. As of 2007, there were fewer than 4,000 colored Angora Goats registered with CAGBA, making them an uncommon and unique breed in North America.

THE FIBER - Angora goats are grown for their fiber called "mohair." Mohair grows at the rate of about one inch per month. They are shorn twice a year and produce 10-20 pounds of mohair annually.

Mohair is a strong and lustrous fiber; a favorite for spinners, doll artisans and crafters. Colored mohair comes in many natural shades of white, tan, red, brown, black and silver and takes dye well adding a glistening halo of color to fiber projects.

ANGORA GOAT FACTS

SIZE: Adult bucks average 125-175 lbs and does 80 -125 lbs.

HORNS: Both sexes have horns which are one of the breed standards and contribute to their beauty and graceful appearance. Horns also assist in cooling the animals in hot climates.

BREEDING: Angoras are seasonal breeders typically kidding from January through April. Does cycle every 19-21 days. Does are generally bred when they are 18 months old.

LIFE EXPECTANCY: Angoras reach full maturity at 4 years old and live 12 -16 years.

CARE OF ANGORA GOATS

A single goat will be unhappy and unhealthy. Goats are herd animals and need at least one additional goat companion.

Angora goats need good nutrition to support their fiber growth. They are picky eaters requiring clean, fresh water and feed. Like all goats, they need minerals suited to their locale.

Angoras need shelter from the sun and inclement weather and protection from predators.

Angora goats need periodic delousing and deworming treatments and hoof trimming will be required. Frequency is dependent upon your geographic area and management regime.

SELECTING YOUR ANGORA GOATS

Obtain the best animals you can afford. Fiber sales and sales of future off-spring will be optimized with a high quality product to offer your customers.

A high quality Angora goat will have good fiber coverage from head to tail. The fleece should be dense, lustrous and reflect fineness appropriate for the age of the animal. The Angora goat should have good conformation and solid and healthy mouth and feet.
